Buster

Name: Buster (

Age: mid 30s

Height: 6' 3"

Sex: Female

Species: Coati

Buster is an engineer. born in space aboard an inherited escape ship, she's never seen her homeworld, or those that attacked it. only heard stories of what it was like before her people were scattered to the stars. she dreams of striking it rich, getting a big enough ship and rounding up as many of her people that are still out there.

Regenerative nano-tech containing a neural backup allows her to resist most injuries and missing body parts (including her brain) can grow back. they have the limitation of only working if she has enough spare body mass though, leading to things like calcium shortages making her bones brittle until refilled. they can recognize when the brain in her head isn't a Coati brain, and will leave the backup on, instead of shutting off. as a side effect of this, she actually only turns into an 'empty headed' moron if the wrong brain is inserted too long. when brainless the AI the runs her nano-tech takes over, but it can either run her body at full speed and be a bit dim, or full intelligence but be herky-jerky and lag a lot. it lacks the ram to do both.

Thanks to her nanotech she has two variant forms, one she calls Armstrong Mode that's a 1:1 recreation of the durability and strength of an infamous metal gear boss, and the ability to turn herself into cake that was added for a haloween costume.

Mother to Brett, younger sister to Hunter, the player who thought up Giselle and Broberk (and is still baffled to this day how they're on the station cause they're just her in game avatars not actual people) and the original Teddy's Brain is a clone of.

Tracy

Name: Tracy

Age: Deceased at 23, has been a ghost for 12 years

Height: 6' 2" at the shoulders, used to be 7'

Sex: Female

Species: Gengar/Arcanine

Tracy is a Gengar, formerly a Haunter, who used to be an Arcanine before a car accident decapitated her. Due to not realizing the piece of metal stabbing her in the neck had gone all the way through she used the last of her fire breath on said piece of metal, heating it up to cauterize the edges of the wound before she blacked out. Hoping that would slow the bleeding and buy the paramedics enough time to save her. This combined with a paramedic 'mon noticing her lack of heart beat before they pulled her free and therefore not aware her head was no longer attached, led to him restarting her heart with a zap before attempting to extract her and making that discovery. as a result, while Tracy died, her headless body was technically alive. She woke up in the hospital to the sound of the doctors bring her very confused and very argumentative mother to the room they had her body in, and was in the process of freaking out that her head was on the opposite side of the room from her body and neither was the perspective she was seeing things from.

In excellent physical shape even before she died, she's not what you'd expect from a buff fire type, and actually greatly despises the 'dumb hothead' stereotype, being a bit of a dork and a massive bookworm. Enough of a book worm that she's pretty sure having books she hasn't read yet is what kept her from passing on. After she died, she converted her home into a haunted house and lived off of that until it became too much of a minor novelty after a few years to bring in any significant income. The house was in the process of being repossessed, and was scheduled to be demolished to expand a parking lot when she found Neurofurs Station and decided to haunt Max's bar instead. She has a zombified head fixed behind the fact that she is permanently

She's figured out how to reshape her (or his if she's in the mood) body, and turn parts of it intangible or invisible at will. like, say, turning her head semitransparent to show off her mind. she likes to use this to pop herself apart.

when not using her body, it tends to either find a warm place to curl up, something soft to cuddle (frequently someone), or both. she disappears from the station periodically due to having a partner and a kid back in Palette town.
