

Jack Tierney

Prior to the Calamity, he was a mechanical engineering prodigy working for the Reimann Corporation Commercial Robotics Division. Once the economy plunged into chaos, he accepted an offer from his colleague in the Artificial Intelligence Division, Yerin Fang, as well as the corporate security officer, Victor Armon, to ditch the company to form a pirate crew. For the next few years before the consolidation of the Merchant's Guild, he served as a shipboard engineer, constructing and programming robotics on the side.

Jack's body has an intelligent onboard AI, dubbed Auto. Their relationship is mutually beneficial.

Appearance

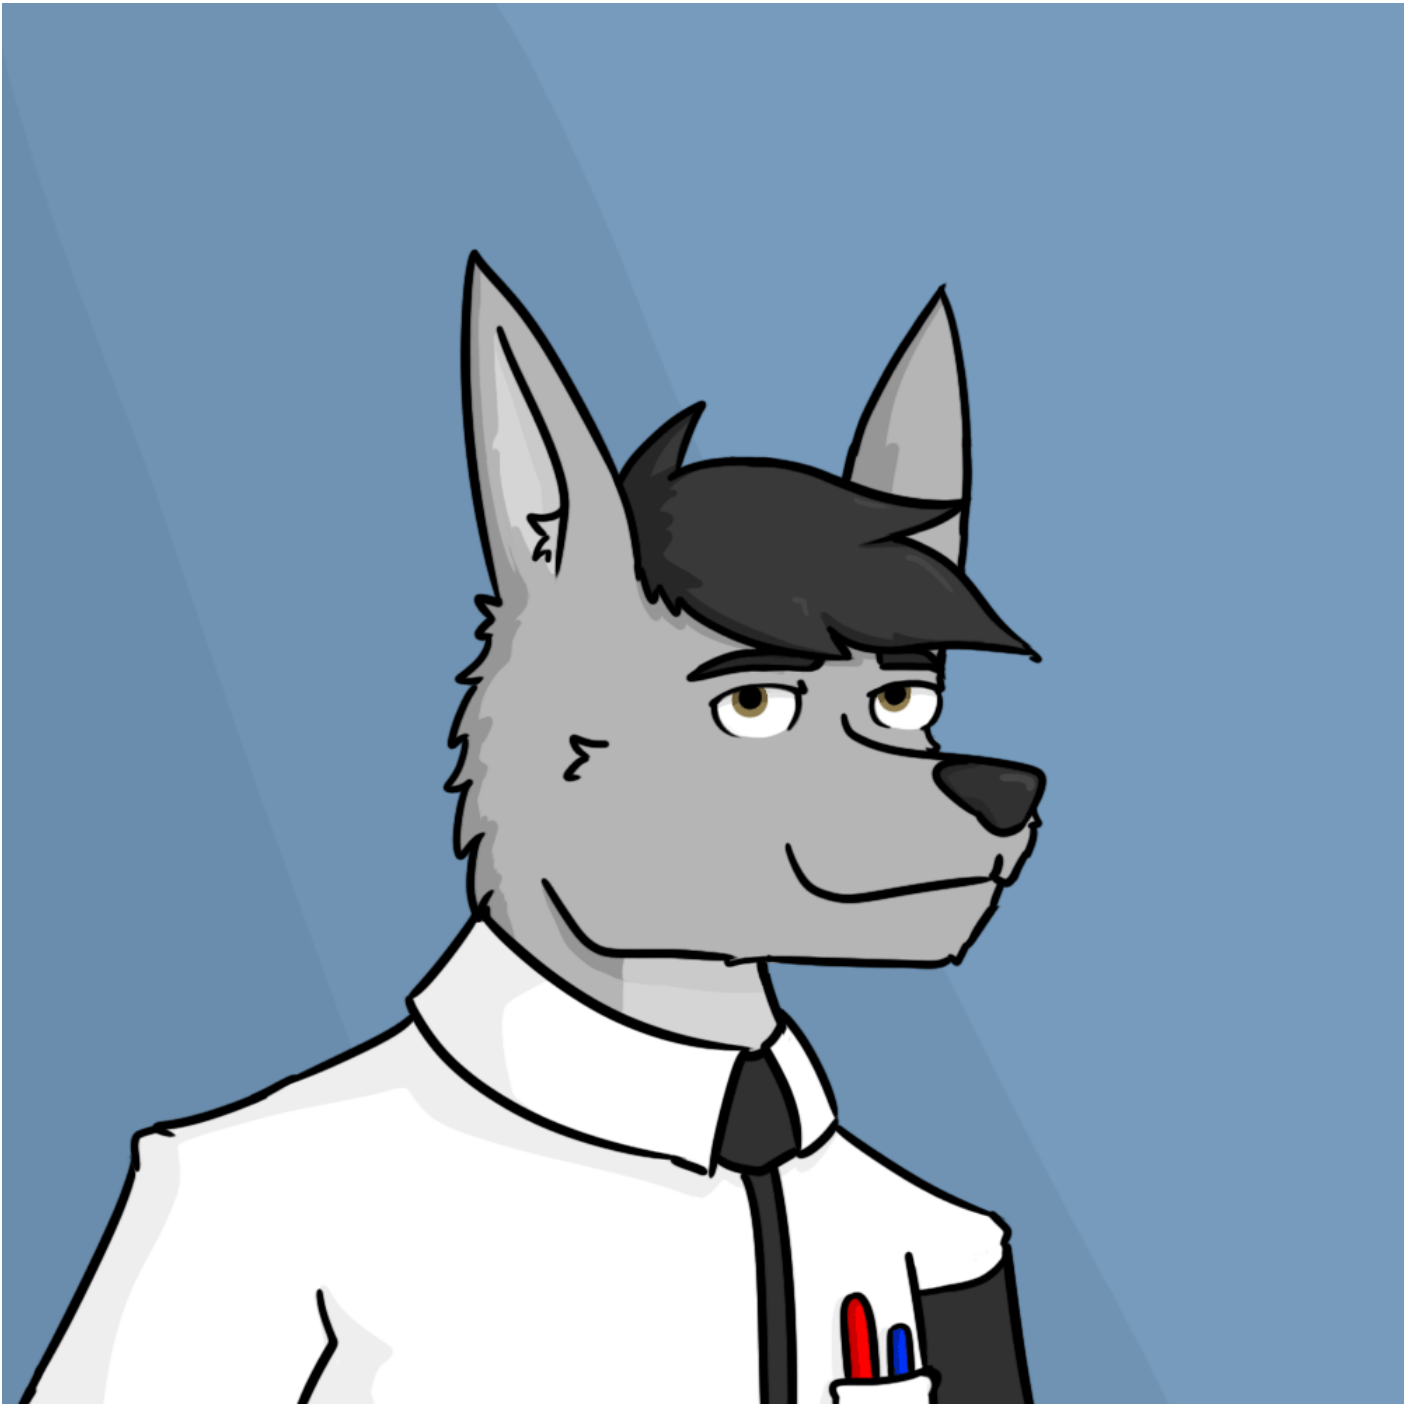

The outwards appearance of normal grey wolf, Jack is 5'10" and weighs about 300 pounds, owing to the metal and electronic components that comprise his entire body. He wears a white long-sleeved collared shirt and tan khakis. He almost always wears a black armband to denote his robotic status.

Personality

Jack is intelligent, crafty, and a dependable craftsman. While slightly paranoid about the state of his brain sometimes, he doesn't mind living about Neurofurs station.

AutoJack is similarly intelligent, yet surprisingly creative for AIs. He is innately protective of Jack's brain. Due to space limitations, Jack was unable to incorporate a speech module and is mute without a blank brain in his head
